Programme outline

What is the relationship between a text and its context? How are writers affected by the circumstances in which they live? What influence do literary texts have on social, cultural, and political life? A degree in English and History at Queen Mary gives students the chance to reflect on these questions, and to consider how these disciplines relate to and inform one another. Students will be trained in the key skills needed to study both subjects at degree level, and examine the interaction between writing and society in the periods that interest them most. Queen Mary's work in both English and History is internationally renowned, and students have the opportunity to work with some of the world's leading teachers and researchers.

Aims of the programme

The programme aims to:

- provide a coherent and intellectually stimulating programme with a focus on literary and historical aspects of texts in English and related languages from variety of historical periods;

Programme Title:

- provide a coherent and intellectually stimulating programme designed to develop critical and analytical skills as well as a broad knowledge and understanding of historical methods and techniques based on the study of past societies and cultures;
- use the programme's interdisciplinary approach to develop not only skills which are appropriate to the two specific disciplines, but also skills which are common to both. In this way, students will come to appreciate that the study of each discipline complements and enriches the study of the other;
- develop skills of literary, historical and cultural analysis, with attention to genre and period;
- encourage engagement with a wide variety of critical and theoretical modes of enquiry;
- introduce students to, and encourage them to employ, a range of methodological approaches;
- enable students to develop independent critical thinking and judgement and to undertake related research tasks;
- develop a range of skills necessary for effective communication of ideas and arguments including an ability to gather, organise and deploy evidence, data and information; structure, coherence, clarity and fluency of both oral and written expression; intellectual integrity;
- provide a basis for further study in History, English or related disciplines.

What will you be expected to achieve?

How will you learn?

Teaching takes a number of forms, including:

- Lectures, including team-delivered lectures
- Seminars, involving a variety of forms of group work
- Small-group tutorials (normally with adviser)
- Field trips, performance and gallery visits;
- Individual guidance and feedback on written work
- Group discussion of written work
- Individual supervision of dissertations;
- Writing retreats, workshops and student-led review sessions.

Learning is supported by:

- Coherently designed and effectively delivered modules;
- The provision of detailed guidance about reading for each module;
- The provision of key materials, either in libraries, in the bookshop, through on-line resources including the Virtual Learning Environment, or as module-packs;
- Widespread availability of lecture recordings
- The design of an appropriate range of learning activities and assessment tasks within each module;
- Encouraging active participation by all students in seminar discussions and other group work;
- Encouraging the use of learning journals, and portfolios;
- Regular review of individual student progress by advisers, and detailed guidance in relation to this;
- the SED Writing and Reference Guide (an online learning resource);
- the work of the Royal Literary Fund Fellows.

How will you be assessed?

Assessment takes a number of forms within the programme. The nature of the assessment is closely connected to the desired learning outcomes and the mode of teaching within each module. Forms of assessment include:

What are the entry requirements?

The entry requirements are as stated in the Queen Mary prospectus for current entry, and on the Queen Mary website <http://www.qmul.ac.uk/undergraduate/coursefinder/index.html>

How will the quality of the programme be managed and enhanced? How do we listen to and act on your feedback?

Each School operates an Education Committee, or equivalent, which advises the School Director of Education relating to the delivery of taught programmes at School level including monitoring the application of relevant QM policies and reviewing all proposals for module and programme approval and amendment before submission to Taught Programmes Board. Student views are incorporated in this Committee's work in a number of ways, such as through student membership, or consideration of student surveys.

All Schools operate an Annual Programme Review of their taught undergraduate and postgraduate provision. The process is normally organised at a School-level basis with the Head of School, or equivalent, responsible for the completion of the school's Annual Programme Reviews. Schools/institutes are required to produce a separate Annual Programme Review for undergraduate programmes and for postgraduate taught programmes using the relevant Undergraduate or Postgraduate Annual Programme Review pro-forma. Students' views are considered in this process through analysis of the NSS and module evaluations.

The Student-Staff Liaison Committee provides a formal means of communication and discussion between Schools and its students. The Committee consists of student representatives from each year in the School together with appropriate representation from staff within the School. It is designed to respond to the needs of students, as well as act as a forum for discussing programme and module developments. Student-Staff Liaison Committees meet regularly throughout the year.

Students are given the opportunity to provide feedback through the Module Evaluation system, and through Queen Mary and national surveys.

The School hosts a dedicated 'Your Voice' page on its online learning environment, designed to highlight the profiles of student representatives, bring together information about student representations and feedback on surveys etc., and forums for updates and consultations.

What academic support is available?

All students beginning study on the programme participate in a series of Welcome Week activities, which involve introductions to the programme and specific inductions in the use of the online learning environment. These events also include opportunities for social interaction, and scheduled small group and individual meetings with advisors.

Each student's academic progress and personal welfare is monitored by an adviser in each School with whom regular meetings are scheduled. Advisors are the designated members of staff with whom students can raise issues and problems, and from whom they can seek advice and guidance.

All teaching staff hold regular drop-in hours in which students are actively encouraged to discuss their work and their progress.

There is a dedicated student support administrator in each School who works with academic staff to assist students in need of support.

Both the student support administrator and all advisors are able to refer students, where appropriate to relevant professional service departments in Queen Mary, including Disability and Dyslexia, Welfare, and Counselling.

A dedicated post of E-Strategy Manager in each School supports students in their use of the online learning environments used on all modules.

The School of English and Drama and the School of History collaborate with the Queen Mary Thinking Writing team and Language Centre to support students in the development of their writing skills. Additional support is provided by the Royal Literary Fund Fellows.

Each School hosts a dedicated site on its online learning environment with referencing and writing advice and support.

How inclusive is the programme for all students, including those with disabilities?

Queen Mary has a central Disability and Dyslexia Service (DDS) that offers support for all students with disabilities, specific learning difficulties and mental health issues. The DDS supports all Queen Mary students: full-time, part-time, undergraduate, postgraduate, UK and international at all campuses and all sites.

Students can access advice, guidance and support in the following areas:

- Finding out if you have a specific learning difficulty like dyslexia
- Applying for funding through the Disabled Students' Allowance (DSA)
- Arranging DSA assessments of need
- Special arrangements in examinations
- Accessing loaned equipment (e.g. digital recorders)
- Specialist one-to-one "study skills" tuition
- Ensuring access to course materials in alternative formats (e.g. Braille)
- Providing educational support workers (e.g. note-takers, readers, library assistants)
- Mentoring support for students with mental health issues and conditions on the autistic spectrum.

Links with employers, placement opportunities and transferable skills

English and History graduates find opportunities for employment in many different careers, especially those calling for excellent communication and analytical skills. Students will have developed their research skills and understanding of the modern world, all of which are valued by employers. Graduates of the English and History degree might find employment in areas such as business, journalism and the media, education, museums and archives, government or public relations.

Programme Title:

Graduates of the programme can expect to have developed:

- communication skills, as students are challenged to express themselves in both speech and writing.
- presentation skills, as students are asked to introduce seminars, make points clearly and effectively, maintain discussion, and field questions.
- reading skills, using a range of approaches to tackle different kinds of texts.
- analytical abilities, as students respond to and assess their underlying agendas and meanings.
- writing abilities, through preparing a range of assignments (including reports, learning journals, and research essays).
- research skills, locating, sifting, and interpreting a range of sources (from printed books to electronic journals).
- time-management skills and the ability to work under pressure, as students organise and fulfill extensive reading commitments and written assessments.
- team-working skills, as students participate with peers in seminars and group research presentations.

Students are regularly notified of placement opportunities via our link with QProjects (part of QM Careers and Enterprise Service).

Every year the Schools see a number of students progress to take higher degrees, both at Queen Mary and elsewhere.
